

Seoul Academy for International Arbitration 2018

Improving Advocacy Skills in International Arbitration

Strong written and oral advocacy skills are critical to success in contemporary international arbitration practice. Dispute resolution practitioners from differing legal cultural traditions and with different native language backgrounds bring different approaches to the processes that we see in global practice today.

Building on the success of the past two installments, the 2018 Seoul Academy brings together a distinguished faculty that comprises experienced civil and common law arbitrators and arbitration counsel with rich experience of arbitration involving Korean parties as well as dispute resolution around the world.

The program is unique for its close-knit and interactive format, with opportunities for students to network, establish new professional friendships and continue to be mentored by faculty members beyond the program. Past students have hailed from common and civil law countries across Asia. The total class size may be restricted to preserve the interactive nature of the format so early applications are advised.
